

better than anything

© Stephen Fisk/SOCAN 2008

of your worldly possessions / is there one you will need when your spirit's been broken / and laid down to bleed among your ambitions / will one set you free on a beautiful morning / with love on your side the veil of moonlight and passion collide that singular moment / you know it won't last and its better than anything / better than anything ... you'll own she'll demand what you're lacking / to settle what's due then make you the offer / that you can't refuse you go on forgiving / what else would you do *on a beautiful morning / with love at your side wrapped in her moonlight / longing subsides

and its better than anything / its better than anything better than anything ... you'll own*

when your spirit's been broken / and laid down to bleed ...
